YOU Can Make a Lifelong Impact on Local Students

Every year, TeenWorks seeks local organizations, businesses, and corporations that can provide six weeks of on-site, meaningful work for a group of 10-14 high school students during June and July. Whether escorting patients in a hospital, beautifying a college campus, working in a warehouse, or landscaping a pocket park, the worksite projects your organization provides for TeenWorks students will help them gain valuable work experiences and practice the soft-skills necessary for permanently entering the workforce, all while helping your organization succeed.

What Worksite Partners Can Expect from TeenWorks

TeenWorks employs, pays, supervises, trains, and provides transportation and meals for all of our student employees. Each worksite team will have two adult TeenWorks staff members present at all times to provide direct supervision and liability for all participating students.

What TeenWorks Expects from Worksite Partners

While TeenWorks invites our corporate Worksite Partners to assist with a portion of the student salaries for those teens working at their site, our nonprofit Worksite Partners are not responsible for any student or staff salaries. Depending upon your worksite needs, students will work daily from 8:00am-11:15am or from 8:00am-2:00pm during the six-week program. TeenWorks staff will work with you to determine the time frame is best for you and the number of days per week you prefer to have a team working at your site. We expect that our Worksite Partners will provide their team of students with daily direction to complete Worksite projects, while TeenWorks' adult staff will be responsible for direct supervision of the team.

- "Last summer, TeenWorks teens were responsible for growing 43 varieties of vegetables at my eight-acre urban farm. It was an amazing experience for me to see teens become passionate about what they're doing and become farmers. They know how to grow their own food now! It was transformative and they really changed my perspective on today's youth."
